

Public Disclosure:
Cardinal Stritch University
Voluntary Resignation of Accreditation
Effective: November 30, 2023

Cardinal Stritch University in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, voluntarily resigned its accreditation with the Higher Learning Commission, effective November 30, 2023.

Its status as an HLC-accredited institution expires on the effective date above. Credits and degrees earned through this date from the institution remain accredited.

All student transcripts have been transferred to the Wisconsin Association of Independent Colleges and Universities (WAICU).

The institution also has established teach-out agreements. Information on transfer and teach-out options is available at: <https://stritch.edu/teach-out-and-transfer-information>

Students with federal loans may be eligible to pursue a closed-school student loan discharge. Information is available at:

<https://studentaid.gov/manage-loans/forgiveness-cancellation/closed-school>

Additional questions about student loans should be directed to the U.S. Department of Education.

To provide transparency for all stakeholders, HLC publishes a Directory of Institutions on its website (hlcommission.org/directory). The directory includes information about a college or university's accreditation status and history with HLC.

About the Higher Learning Commission
